2. To celebrate his 90th birthday, skydiver makes 9 jumps in 4 hours

Pat Moorehead decided to dive right into his 90s. On Nov. 20, Moorehead celebrated his 90th birthday at Skydive Perris in Perris, California. From 8 a.m. to noon, he completed nine jumps, one for each decade of his life, as hundreds of relatives and friends watched from the ground. A Navy and Air Force veteran and retired fire battalion chief, Moorehead got the skydiving bug in 1969, and since then has made nearly 6,700 jumps. He's appeared in commercials and movies, founded the Skydivers Over Sixty Society (SOS), and even met his wife of 37 years on a skydiving plane. "You might say we fell for each other," he told KTLA. A Moorehead moved his birthday into a fundraiser for the International Skydiving Museum and Hall of Fame, and donated more than $16,000 to the organization. Moorehead said he's not "trying to set an example for anyone," but if what he's doing "inspires people to realize that aging is a gift that you can make something of, that's great." [KTLA]

How to Celebrate your 90th? CSDR Falls One Jump from a Plane 9 Times in Five Hours Game Short of Championship as Dream Season Ends

"You don't quit skydiving because you get old, you get old because you quit skydiving." Pat Moorehead

Perris, CA—From the Summer of Woodstock to Richard Nixon's first day as president, 1969 was a seminal year. For Pat Moorehead, parachutes of various disciplines dove beautiful 90-looking shaped formations in the sky, and a couple hundred.

Moorehead is the founder of the Skydivers Over Sixty Society (SOS), which now counts over 2,300 members worldwide. He chose to contribute all proceeds from donations and sales of T-shirts, to the International Skydiving Museum and Hall of Fame, in which he was inducted in 2016 at the age of 94.

Due to the generosity of several benefactors and the sale of over 250 T-shirts commemorating the event, he was able to donate more than $16,000 to the Museum.

In a region rife with powerhouse high school football, populated with players destined for Division I college and pro stardom in coming years, it was the smallest of these 16 divisions that captured the interest of the nation.

For the first time in its history, and with its first winning record in a decade, the squad from The California School for the Deaf at Riverside (CSDR) was playing for a CIF Championship in Division 2 of eight-man football, taking on Camp Park Faith Baptist.
