POPS Winter Nationals Draws Record Crowd

stories of how it used to be in the "old" days of round canopies and military surplus gear.

The weather always seems to cooperate at least enough to finish the competitions, and this year Florida provided excellent weather throughout the two weeks of skydives and fun leading up to the competition.

A couple of news worthy items came out of this meet; First a new organization had to be spawned as many of the POPS are now over the age of sixty, so a group calling themselves SOS (Skydivers Over Sixty) has been born and already has a ten way to it's credit.

Secondly the women of POPS have decided that they too are going to start making bigger all POPS women formations and there was an attempted 6-way all POPS women load that funneled as the last jumper attempted to dock.

All in all it was the most successful Winter POPS Nationals ever, and Jimmy promises that it will be even better next year.
